'It is more blessed to give...'

By LLOYD MAFFITT

"But you were always a good man of business, Jacob," faltered Scrooge...

"Business!" cried the Ghost, wringing his hands again. "Mankind was my business. The common welfare was my business; charity, mercy, forbearance, and benevolence were, all, my business. The dealings of my trade were but a drop of water in the comprehensive ocean of my business."

At Christmastime, Mankind becomes almost everybody's business as "charity, mercy, forbearance, and benevolence" crowd out the less admirable qualities that too often prevail in people for the rest of the year.

To assure that the goodwill arising from these virtues will not be dissipated, efficiency has been added.

Many years ago Burlington Christmas Clearance Program was set up to avoid duplication of services; this year its 25 sponsoring organizations channeled their work through the Community Action office at 1204 Washington (Christmas Clearance for 1970 closed up shop Friday).

Persons applying to the county welfare department for Christmas commodities are referred to the Clearance program, whose secretary is paid by Council of Welfare Agencies.

CHRISTMAS is a gratifying but sometimes harrowing time for the Salvation Army, and its commanding officer, Major Don Olson.

The Army operates the Star of Hope on which a light is lighted for each $100 received; it works closely with Christmas Clearance and with service clubs in carrying out the Tour of Lights, in which shut-ins and county home residents are driven about the city to see the Christmas decorations.

This year, Major Olson reported, the Army will put out at least 65 food baskets. Monday at 7 p.m. it will hold a party for about 100 children.

It will visit nursing homes to sing carols and leave remembrances.

And it operates the toy shop.

The shop provides new toys and dolls (and some repaired ones) for families who come, get them, and take them home, to give the children on Christmas day as gifts "from Santa Claus." This year the Army bought 600 new toys, and is getting 100 dolls from Burlington Bank and Trust Co.

SERVICE CLUBS live up to their ideals perhaps more at Christmastime than normally.

The Altrusa club, womens service club, this year gave a party for Burlington Senior Citizens at Memorial auditorium.

The Jaycees arranged their regular shopping tour, in which arrangements are made with a store to provide items — usually clothing — for the underprivileged; this year the Jaycees arranged to provide $10 for each child in 10 families. In addition, they are providing food baskets for nine more families.

The Jaycees also help the Salvation Army deliver food baskets. The Kiwanis club booked several Yuletide activities this year.

In addition to ringing bells for the Salvation Army, it bankrolled refreshments for parties at Jennie Coulter Day Nursery, Hope Haven School, Productions, Inc., and the two Senior Citizen groups. It also purchased gifts for underprivileged.

THE LIONS club, in addition to operating the Tour of Lights caravan for residents of the county home and other shut-ins, has budgeted $500 to provide food, cloth-

Requiem near a country churchyard

Sometime between Wednesday night and Friday morning, the serenity of this pastoral scene 9 miles west of Burlington, with historic Long Creek church and its adjoining cemetery, at right, near the Iowa Army Ammunition Plant, was broken when the body of Mrs. Mary Lange was deposited in Long Creek, seen wandering through the foreground. The body was discovered Saturday morning under a bridge on this extension of Agency road, a dead-end closed 50 yards farther by the IAAP boundary fence.

Senate snarled over SST; block progress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate struggled for nine hours Saturday but made little progress toward ending a legislative snarl that has halted action on several key bills and prevented the 91st Congress from quitting for the year.

At day's end, the flaming controversy over whether to continue development of an American supersonic transport (SST) plane with a $210 million federal subsidy still blocked the road to adjournment. A vote to shut off a filibuster against the SST measure fell 18 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed.

Although the leadership was agreed that Nixon's welfare reform program was dead for this year, the Senate refused on a 65 to 15 test vote engineered by the White House to kill the welfare plan outright. This assured the administration that the plan at least would get a floor hearing some time next year.

Late in the day, Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott relayed a request by the President that the Senate meet on Sundays and "consider very seriously" meeting 24 hours a day to dispose of his priority legislation.

"As far as round-the-clock sessions, the answer is no," said Scott's Democratic counterpart, Mike Mansfield of Montana.

When Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., said "this senator will not be here" if the Senate meets on Sunday, that idea was dropped without further discussion.

Nixon had proposed round-the-clock sessions earlier Saturday at a White House meeting with GOP congressional leaders as one way to get action on the SST, welfare reform, Social Security increases and other major bills.

The White House said Nixon might even convene the 92nd Congress on Jan. 3 rather than the Jan. 21 date set by legislators.

"Failure of this Congress to act means that matters of urgent importance that mean jobs and income which affect millions of Americans, and Americans in need, could be delayed for as much as a year because of the failure of this Congress to act," the White House quoted him as saying.

Conceding that the Senate "is confused and in doubt," Mansfield said the proposed import trade quotas on textiles and shoes and Nixon's welfare reform measure were dead for the year.

Meanwhile, Sens. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., and Allen J. Ellender, D-La., key figures in the Cambodian aid controversy, were understood to have reached secret agreement on movement of Nixon's request for $255 million to arm Cambodia, which includes a ban on introduction of U.S. ground troops in that country. (See story page 5.)

Mansfield said that the bills now stacked up must be passed sooner or later, even if it means convening the new 92nd Congress at 12:01 p.m. on Jan.

MISS AMERICA of 1971, Phyllis George, of Denton, Tex., is coming to Burlington. For more details, see page 2.

3, one minute after the 91st Congress legally expires.

The Democratic leader said that Sunday sessions were all right but that 24-hour sessions would accomplish less than shorter, daytime sessions.

Although Congress has sent Nixon a resolution setting Jan. 21 as the date for convening the next Congress, Nixon could refuse to sign it and thus oblige lawmakers to meet Jan. 3, the date set by the Constitution unless Congress decides on another date.

Find body of murder victim

By DAVE COLLOGAN

Law enforcement officers are pressing investigation into the killing of Mrs. Mary Lange, 37.

Her body was found Saturday morning in the cold waters of Long Creek, near a quiet country church yard, nine miles west of Burlington—and 1½ miles from the entrance of L-Kee-Ta Girl Scout Camp.

She had been reported missing Friday morning, and had not been seen since Wednesday night.

William Moore, 55, whose farm lies nine miles west of Burlington immediately west of the Iowa Army Ammunition Plant, was on his way to level out a pile of dirt on his property. The dirt had been removed from a freshly-dug grave in nearby Long Creek cemetery.

About three-quarters of a mile northeast of his home, Moore crossed a bridge spanning Long Creek and looked down into the water "to see if any kids had thrown any junk in."

The bridge is 250 yards east of Long Creek church and cemetery. The spot is three miles straight south of Danville and three west and one south of Middletown.

What Moore did see "made my stomach turn upside down," he said. His grisly discovery was a body, which was later identified as that of Mrs. Lange.

Moore said he first saw the woman's black imitation fur coat in the water but when he looked closer he saw the body.

It was floating in about two feet of water near the coat. Moore said he immediately drove home to call the sheriff's office.

Moore's call reached the

Mrs. Lange's body was found in Long Creek just south of a small bridge on an unimproved road. The road, which is called the Agency Road extension, lies directly west of Burlington's Agency St., and continues into the IAAP grounds which lie 50 yards east of the bridge, blocked by a boundary fence.

Mrs. Lange's body was floating face down in the water with her head toward the south. Sheriff Merritt Quick said the body was Amended bus plan tops council agenda

An agenda highlighted by several potentially-controversial issues faces Burlington city councilmen when they convene in formal session at 7 p.m. Monday in city hall.

Heading the list of key motions is a resolution to renew Burlington Transit Lines' bus license — but with a recommendation from city administrators that fares be raised a nickel across the board and the seven present routes cut to six.

Some popular opposition is expected to an ordinance regulating trash burning, within the city limits.

Among other provisions, the law (slated for second of three readings) would prescribe a specific type of burner for trash, prohibit nighttime and Monday burning and burning of garbage, and require constant direct supervision of any trash fire.

The airport is involved in three agreements: One to set Ozark Airlines fees, another to set up a hangar rental schedule, and the third to name Midland Architects to draw plans for remodeling of the main terminal building.

Third reading and a final vote are slated for a law which would permit use of mobile structures as offices or caretakers' quarters in some commercial and industrial zones, with a controversial one-year limit on such uses.

The councilmen will also be asked to accept this fall's slurry sealing of various streets and a contract to install traffic signal lights at Fifth and Washington.

Senate negotiators also refused to accept a House provision requiring state cost sharing in the presently all federal program.

A spokesman said that the conferees "broke up in bad humor." They had been meeting to work out differences in previously-passed House and Senate bills.

Both bills would have expanded the existing food stamp program under which the federal government pays out about $1.4 billion annually. Under the program eligible families buy stamps that can be turned in for food.

Cuban shrimpers get US protection

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI)—A small Cuban shrimp fleet, protected by the U.S. State Department, dropped its nets in waters claimed by the state of Florida Saturday, triggering a federal court suit.

"If we win the case," said Gov. Claude Kirk, "Cuba can't complain."

Eleven Cuban trawlers arrived in the Gulf of Mexico Wednesday and the Florida Marine Patrol threatened to arrest the crewmembers and impound their boats and gear if they began fishing. But the U.S. State Department intervened, obtaining a temporary restraining order from the Justice Department Friday night forbidding the state to make any arrests.

The Justice Department claimed that any arrests "would seriously embarrass the United States" and might jeopardize American foreign policy "with respect to freedom of the seas."

The order forbids Florida to interfere with fishing beyond 12 miles from Florida shores. The state claims ownership of submerged land as far out as a straight line between Dry Tortugas and Cape Moreno.

The disputed area is a roughly triangular patch of salt water between the far tip of the island string and the point where the western coastline of the peninsula curves northward.

U.S. District Judge Winston Arnoff set Dec. 28 as the date of a hearing on the government's motion for a preliminary injunction against arrest of the fishermen. The hearing is scheduled before U.S. District Judge David L. Middlebrooks in Tallahassee.

The federal government contended that Florida's sovereignty extends only to a 12-mile boundary that strictly follows the curves of the coastline.

Kirk said he welcomed the federal action because, "it gets us into court, where we have been trying to get to ascertain our boundaries."

apparently taken from her car, carried down to the creek on the north side of the bridge and dumped into the water. There appeared to be a wound at the back of her head.

Quick said the water had been deeper for the last couple of days and he surmised the current carried the body to a point a yard south of the bridge where it caught on the post of a fence which cuts across the creek. In addition to the body, officers found Mrs. Lange's coat floating in the water beside her.

The body was kept in the water for about three hours after it was discovered while officers took photos of the scene, made measurements and searched the area for any other clues.

It was removed from the water by sheriff's reservists shortly after 1 p.m. and taken to Frugh's Chapel where an autopsy was performed.

Autopsy inconclusive

The autopsy was completed about 8:30 p.m. Saturday. Quick said results were so inconclusive, however, that neither the type of weapon used nor exact cause of death could be determined.

"It wasn't even necessarily the blow to the head," Quick said. "They've got to run some further tests. . . It's not over yet."

Dr. G. R. Zimmerman performed the pathological exam at the request of County Medical Examiner Dr. Orville

Check Activities

Quick, who is conducting the investigation with the cooperation of the Burlington police department and the state Bureau of Criminal Investigation, said Saturday officers are attempting to retrace the activities of Mrs. Lange on Wednesday evening. A clerk in Burlington's municipal court for the past two years, she was last seen at 8:45 Wednesday evening when she left a Christmas party for municipal employees at Memorial auditorium.

The car was found by Burlington police at 12:37 a.m. Friday. It had been parked on Smith St. just off Plane in west central Burlington about 20 blocks west of the auditorium.

The spot where the car was found is about one-third of the way from the auditorium to the Lange home, which is on Washington Rd., just east of the county home west of West Burlington.

Analyze Stains

The car had a number of what police believe to be blood stains on it. The stains were found on the back of the front seat, the left rear fender, rear bumper and in the trunk. In addition, a white shag rug found in the back seat appeared to be blood-soaked.

Samples of the stains and other evidence found in the car are being sent to the FBI laboratory in Washington, D.C. for analysis. Officers believe the stains are blood but cannot be definite until results of the tests are received.

In addition several sets of fingerprints were lifted from the car and are being processed.

Quick said it appears Mrs. Lange was struck on the back of the head with a blunt instrument, then her body was put in the trunk of her car, taken to the bridge and dumped into the water. He said the killer then apparently drove the car into Burlington and left it at the Smith St. location.

He said there were at least two blows to the head and it was thought the instrument used may have been a tire iron, but until tests were complete he could not be sure.

Quick said the body was in reasonably good condition, probably because it had been immersed in the cold water.

He said there was no reason to believe she was sexually molested or robbed and he added it did not appear she had put up a struggle.

Quick responded "Yes" when asked if there were any suspects in the case but would not be more specific.

"I think we're pretty close (to making an arrest) but knowing it and proving it is something else," Quick said.

He said he and deputy Mel Berges were going to talk to more people Saturday night and Inspector James Ewing of the Burlington police force said he was also planning on talking to more people Saturday night. Berges said at least six people had been questioned but no one had been interrogated.

Identified By Husband

The body was identified by Mrs. Lange's husband shortly after 4 p.m. Saturday after it had been taken to the mortuary. Many of the officers investigating the case knew Mrs. Lange because she worked at the courthouse. However, because the body was covered with mud from the creek and her face was swollen, they were reluctant to make a positive identification until Lange had viewed the body.

The body was fully clothed and the clothes matched the description of the one she was wearing when she left the party. A brown or black purse carried by Mrs. Lange and her left shoe have not been found. A more extensive search of the area near the bridge was planned for Sunday.

The road was muddy Wednesday night following a snowstorm during the day. Officers found a number of footprints and tire tracks in the frozen mud Saturday but they could not say definitely Saturday if Mrs. Lange's car had been at the scene.

In addition to Lange's viewing the body, dental records were checked to confirm the identification.

Lange had filed for a divorce from his wife on June 17. T. K. Ford is his attorney. However, the couple and their three children were still living together. Officers report the children, Connie, 18, Danny, 14 and Diane, 11, are staying with relatives.

Officers said Lange told them he last saw his wife at 7 p.m. Wednesday when she left their home for the party.

Find knife victims

NEW YORK (UPI)—The bodies of two elderly cousins were found stabbed to death in their beds in a quiet residential section of Brooklyn Friday. Police identified the two as James Nechland, 82, a widower, and George Petropoulos, 75, a waiter and a bachelor. The bodies, bound and gagged, were found by Nechland's daughter, Carolyn Nechland, of Brooklyn, who visited the apartment when the telephone went unanswered.

Rule against filing fee

DALLAS (UPI)—A three-judge federal panel has ruled political party filing fees in primary elections were unconstitutional in Texas in a decision that could have nationwide effect.

"A filing fee violates the First Amendment and the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment when it is used as a revenue-collecting device," the opinion said.

Thirty-three states charge fees to candidates filing in primary elections.

The ruling came out of lawsuits filed in Tarrant and El Paso Counties by two men who wanted to run for public office in the May Democratic primary but could not afford the filing fee.

U.S. District Judge William M. Taylor Jr. of Dallas wrote the court's unanimous opinion. The defendants in the suit were the Democratic party, which charges the filing fees, and various officials, including the governor, for permitting the assessments.

A COAT NEAR THE EDGE OF THE BRIDGE is what led to the discovery of the body of Mrs. Mary Lange. William Moore, at left, said he first noticed the coat in Long Creek and stopped to investigate. Moore, who lives about one-half mile from the creek then notified sheriff's officers. Others in picture are members of the Sheriff's Reserves.
