

Too much conflict over state highways

LINCOLN (UPI) — Chairman Jerome Warner of the legislature's Roads Committee said Tuesday too much conflict exists within the state over how to handle highway improvements.

He made the statement following a two-day hearing by his committee on the $450,000 state highway needs, classification and management studies.

Witnesses from major highway user organizations testified. Most took exception to portions of the studies' recommendations.

"These hearings pointed up one big thing—that there is a lot of disagreement over the best approach for an improved highway program," Warner said.

"These conflicting interests are going to have to compromise on some issues or we won't get a thing done in regard to our highway and street needs."

Warner said no organization offered a better alternative to the hired consultants' proposal that the state be given central control over all local roadbuilding.

"To me this is the guts of the highway matter. We need an integrated state and local road network and to achieve that requires administrative coordination," he said.

Extension Clubs

December meeting of the Upper Ten club was held at Mrs. Melvin Wetgen's home with Mrs. Walter Wetgen as a guest. Collection was taken to be used toward purchase of playground equipment for the Opportunity Center. Carols were sung and officers were in charge of entertainment. Prizes went to Mmes. LaVern Wetgen, Clarence and Glen Goering.

Members and their husbands had their annual Christmas party at Club 31. Prizes in 10-point were won by Glen Goering and Mrs. Julius Gebring, high; Julius Gebring and Mrs. Dale Lutjens, low.

Each member of U and I club brought a guest for their annual Christmas party at a Columbus cafe. Mmes. Rodney Jacobsen and Fred Krueger were in charge of entertainment and awarded Yahtzee prizes to Mmes. Connie King and Julius Hambd. Mrs. Arlyn Borchers won the door prize. The group also had a gift exchange.

Mrs. Gus Viergutz was hostess to Town and Country club, assisted by Mmes. Jack Bullington, Ed Trotholz and Leo Janssen. Secret pal names were drawn for the coming year. Game prizes went to Mrs. B.T. Thoeke, high, Mrs. Bernard Hay, low, and the door prize to Mrs. Harvey Welch. Gift exchange was followed by lunch, with each member receiving tray favors and a handmade tree ornament.

Mrs. Arnold Curtis was a guest of the Sociable Sues club at Mrs. Ramon Jacobson's home. Members brought bibs and lap robes for the Newman Grove Community hospital, and the club is painting several of the hospital rooms. Club voted to purchase a library book for the Newman Grove library and orange juice for the Mid-Nebraska Lutheran Home. Christmas songs were sung, gifts exchanged and Mrs. Harold Christensen read the Christmas story from Luke. Mrs. Ronald Wiese had charge of games.

Study will be made on TV service

LINCOLN (UPI) — A two-month statewide study to determine the efficiency and future needs of the state's instructional television service will begin in January, it was announced Tuesday.

According to Jack McBride, general manager of the Nebraska Television Network, the study will be conducted by a consultant team of recognized experts as part of the national project for the improvement of televised instruction.

The project, funded by the Ford Foundation, will be made at no expense to the taxpayers, McBride said.

Any resemblance in the foregoing to persons living or dead seems more or less inevitable.
