New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller were rumored as possible successors to Secretary of State William Rogers. But Rogers, a long-time Nixon associate, has shown no inclination to leave his post early in a second term.

Neither has Henry Kissinger, star of a galaxy of White House officials, said publicly what he plans to do in second term. But there is little question that the job of chief foreign-policy adviser is his for as long as he wants it.

Klein Hinted Leaving

One of Kissinger's colleagues, presidential consultant John Scali, is reported planning to take a non-government job. So is Nixon's director of communications, Herbert G. Klein. But no plans have been disclosed.

And some middle-level White House aides are known to be eyeing private jobs because of the hectic 12-hour days and seven-day weeks.

Nixon's top domestic aide, John Ehrlichman, has indicated interest in becoming attorney general if Kleindienst decides to return to private law practice, sources say.

As successor to Laird, Deputy Secretary Kenneth Rush seems a possible choice. Rush, who was a law professor at Duke university when Nixon studied there, came to the Pentagon after serving as U. S. ambassador to West Germany. He is credited with a considerable influence in the negotiation of an improved access agreement affecting Berlin.

Romney's Successor?

Speculation about a successor for Romney has centered on Samuel Jackson, now assistant HUD secretary for community planning and management, and Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Cost of Living Council.

Jackson, a black, stamped the country extensively for the G.O.P. ticket.

Rogers has ducked recent questions about his post-election intent. But should he leave, there is a chance HEW Secretary Elliot Richardson would get the nod.

John Volpe says he likes his job as secretary of transportation and will stay on as long as the President wishes, although perhaps not for a full four years. There have been published reports that Helen Bentley, chairman of the Maritime Commission, would like to succeed him.

Earl Butz, named secretary of agriculture when Clifford Hardin resigned in November, 1971, is another who campaigned vigorously for Nixon, speaking two or three or more times weekly throughout the year.

Butz "Abrasive"

Butz relishes politics, and seems likely to stay on for the time being. Some members of congress regard Butz as somewhat abrasive, which might be a factor in Nixon's decision whether to keep him in office.

Laird has been vague about his plans. He regards himself as knowledgeable on health, education and welfare matters because of long service on house appropriations panels dealing with them. Thus he might like to switch to HEW should Richardson move out.

Elsewhere in Nixon's official family, Chairman Herbert Stein of the Council of Economic Advisers, plans to take a teaching position at the University of Virginia next year. He probably will be succeeded as chairman by one of the other two members, Ezra Solomon or Marina Whitman, the first woman member.

At the Environmental Protection Agency, Administrator William T. Ruckelshaus has walked a tightrope since the agency's inception in December, 1970. His decisions at times have been in conflict with powerful industries and powerful administration officials.

There has been no solid indication that he is on the way out, but if it were to happen it would be no great surprise.

John B. Turner and Nan Wood Graham are shown with a painting of Turner's grandfather. The painting, entitled "John B. Turner Pioneer", was done by Mrs. Graham's brother, the late Grant Wood. Turner and his wife Thursday donated their collection of Grant Wood paintings, graphics, sculpture and memorabilia to the Cedar Rapids Art Center.

Decorations from Studio

The donor's grandfather. In this painting, Wood sought to capture the spirit of one of Cedar Rapids' founding fathers and most prominent citizens. Wood posed Mr. Turner in front of an old map of Linn county and developed a painting that is considered uniquely American in its strength and forthrightness of design.

"Woman with Plants", a portrait of the artist's mother, done about the same time, has been in the Cedar Rapids Art Assn. collection for many years.

Wood did 19 lithographs, which were published from 1937 through 1941 by the Associated American Artist Gallery of New York. These prints, much like his paintings, were immensely popular and sold out in a very short period of time. A complete set of the prints is included in the Turner gift.

David Turner, father of the donor, was a close friend and patron of the artist. Wood's well-known studio apartment at 5 Turner alley was located on the second floor of the carriage house behind Turner mortuary. It was there that many of Wood's most famous paintings were done. Many of the decorations he created for his studio are included in the gift.

Over the years, David Turner promoted Wood's work and purchased paintings when he was in need of ready cash. This resulted in the current extensive collection.

Major Importance

Donn Young, director of the Cedar Rapids Art Center, said, "The collection is of major importance and will allow students and historians a chance to closely study the development of Wood's style. When the collection is added to the works of Wood already in the Art Center, Cedar Rapids will become the focal point of interest for all people who are interested in the work of this American master."

Willis E. Lamb, president of the art association board of directors, said, "Probably no American artist has ever captured the imagination and interest of the public in such an intense and long-lasting way as has Grant Wood. The art association looks forward to the challenge of establishing a permanent gallery at the Art Center to house the collection."

Robert B. Faxon, executive vice-president of the Cedar Rapids-Marion Area Chamber of Commerce, expressed his delight with the gift.

"John B. Turner's gift exemplifies the Cedar Rapids' interest in the heritage of his community to the highest degree. Residents and visitors to the area now and into the future will be able to enjoy and appreciate the work of one of America's outstanding artists," Faxon said.

Seek Motive in Coggon Slaying

MANCHESTER — Carl Anthony Brunen, 81, rural Coggon, was found beaten to death Wednesday in front of his home. Delaware county Sheriff Mike Barr said Brunen, who apparently died of massive head injuries, lived alone at his residence six miles northwest of Coggon.

The body was discovered by the owner of the property he lived on, Kenneth Barker. Sheriff Barr reported Brunen had been dead for several hours before his body was found.

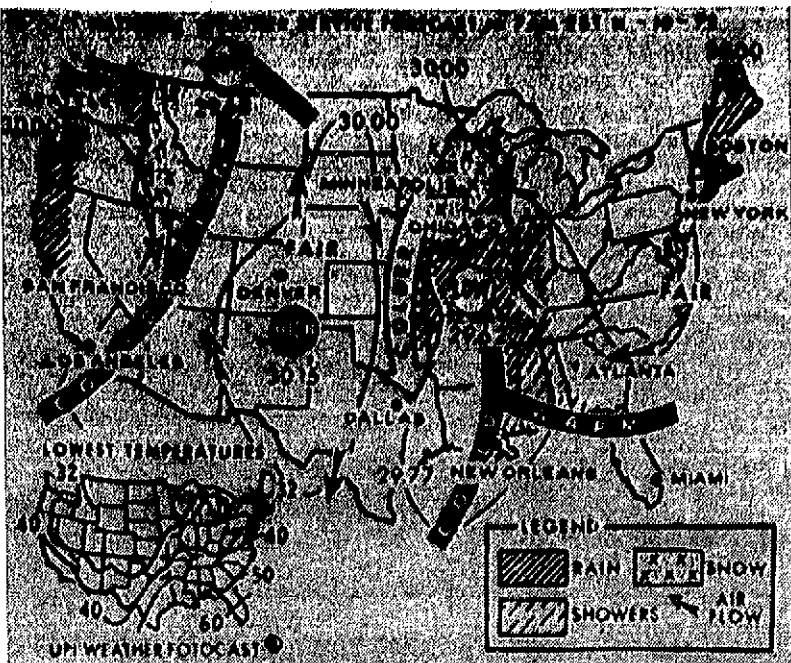

Deputies and officers of the Iowa bureau of criminal investigation, who were called in on the case, Thursday were seeking a motive for the slaying.

Carl A. Brunen, 81, a lifelong resident of the Central City and Coggon areas, was born Nov. 9, 1888, in Jones county.

Surviving are four brothers, Bruno, William and John Brunen of Central City, and Thomas Brunen of Cedar Rapids; six sisters, Clara Mayou of Rochester, Minn., Lena Henderson of Central City, Martha Fleming of Eagle Point, Ore., Augusta Hunter and Margaret Barker of Coggon, and Mrs. Eleanor Merritt of Walker.

Services—Friday at 10 a.m. at the Murdoch chapel in Central City with burial in Holy Cross cemetery at Anamosa. Friends may call at the Murdoch chapel in Central City.

Historical Society, which he founded and serves as president without salary. But he is a good friend of Nixon's so a federal appointment would not be out of the question.

The same holds for Kyl, 53, who told reporters Thursday he could be of service to the U. S. bureau of sport fisheries or the department of agriculture.

Kyl said he also is giving some thought to returning to teaching, perhaps in a small college, or teaching Indians because of his interest in them.

Schwengel is eligible for a government pension but Kyl and Miller would have to wait until they reach 60 years of age before qualifying for theirs.

Sen. and Mrs. Miller were cheered at the Washington airport Wednesday evening by the senator's office staff who presented her with a bouquet of yellow roses and him with a red carnation for his lapel.

Business as Usual

Miller was in his office Thursday and it was business as usual despite his crushing defeat.

A staffer explained that "our deal was for six years and not until we got bounced so we'll be here until his term expires."

Stan Brown, Miller's administrative assistant, said Herbert Hoover Presidential Library officials in West Branch have requested that Miller's personal papers be deposited there and that probably is where they will go when Miller cleans his office files.

Brown said pending matters on which action cannot be completed before the senator leaves office will be turned over to Iowa congressmen from the districts where the cases originated.

Brown said constituent requests that can be handled in the two months remaining of Miller's term will be taken care of while those requiring a longer period will be referred to the new senator or to congressmen from the constituent's district.

Senator and Mrs. Miller are planning to spend Thanksgiving in Washington after a post-election "rest up" trip where they'll play some golf. They had not decided Thursday where they'll take their rest trip.

they take on the awesome responsibilities of this position." Nixon added, however, that he is very pessimistic about whether campaigns actually can be shortened as a practical matter, because they are so competitive.

Press Policy — In his new term, "we are going to have an open Administration, contact with the press, and so forth, but only when it serves the public interest.

"It was my view that it would not have been in the best interest of the country to have held press conferences during periods of delicate negotiations."

To Grand Jury on Drunk Driving Count

William Parrish, 1625 Park Town lane NE, waived a preliminary hearing Wednesday in municipal court and was bound over to the grand jury on a charge of drunk driving. He was arrested Sept. 3.
