The New Vice-President

Ford Goals: Truth, Compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald Ford has taken the oath as the nation's 40th vice-president and pledged loyalty to President Nixon and devotion to the search for truth and compromise.

The 60-year-old Ford was sworn in by Chief Justice Burger in a historic ceremony late Thursday. Looking on were a packed joint session of congress, the government's highest officials and a nation watching on television.

Just hours earlier, the house, in which Ford served 25 years, had approved him by a 387-35 vote after a debate punctuated by statements that Nixon's Watergate trouble might shortly elevate Ford to the presidency.

"On Own Merits"

"Whatever grounds there are for impeachment can now be judged solely on their own merits by members on both sides of the aisle," Rep. Matsunaga (D-Hawaii) said after the vote. He noted that Republicans especially had been reluctant to talk about impeachment while the vice-presidency was vacant.

Added to the senate's earlier 92-3 vote, the house action completed confirmation of the first vice-president nominated under the 25th Amendment, enacted in 1967.

Nixon stood nearby and senators, diplomats, family and friends packed the house chamber as the veteran house Republican leader took office.

Ford's eight-minute speech was interrupted 10 times by applause, from both Republican and Democratic sides of the house chamber, especially when he pledged "my dedication to the rules of law and equal justice for all Americans."

Senate Initiation

His wife held the Bible on which he swore to "support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic." His four children sat near Mrs. Nixon in a gallery.

After the 15-minute ceremony, Ford led senators back to their side of the Capitol. There he assumed his duties as president of the senate in a brief initiation ceremony.

"To the distinguished senators who examined my fitness to be your presiding officer, I pledged my conviction that truth is the glue that holds government together. In the subsequent hearings before the committee on the judiciary of the house I added that compromise is the oil that makes governments go," Ford said.

After 25 minutes handling the vice-president's sole constitutional duty, presiding over the senate, Ford was off to a reception given by his Michigan colleagues.

He presided over the first 12 minutes of Friday's senate session, then turned the gavel over to Sen. Clark (D-Iowa).

Tone of Debate

In house debate preceding the vote, Democrats repeatedly assailed Nixon, while Republicans concentrated on praising Ford rather than defending their embattled President.

Rep. Rodina (D-N.J.), who chaired the house judiciary committee hearings on Ford, voted against him as a protest of what he called "the present administration's indifference to the plight of so many Americans."

Rep. Long (D-Md.) said house

Republicans should urge Nixon's impeachment or replacement to save their own political futures.

"If you keep the present incumbent in office for three more years the Democrats could win in 1976 with the Boston Strangler," he said.

"A Little Lull"

Many Republicans said privately what Sen. Javits (R-N.Y.) said publicly a day earlier, that installation of Ford increases the likelihood Nixon will be impeached if he fails to restore his credibility.

Rep. Anderson (Ill.) chairman of the house G.O.P. conference, conceded: "Ultimately, that could be the result of today's events." But he said he expects "a little lull" while congressmen sample home-front opinion during a month-long recess scheduled to start in two weeks.

Truckers: Action or New Tieups

Gazette Leased Wires

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Protesting truckers warned the government Friday to ease the truck fuel shortage or face a two-day nationwide truck stoppage next week.

In a two-hour meeting with Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar, a delegation representing some of the protesting truckers asked for "concrete action to ease the crisis."

Brinegar told the truckers they appeared "to have a legitimate complaint" about fuel shortages at truck stops, and promised to get them "some answers by Monday."

The truckers and officials of the Teamsters union were scheduled to meet with the head of the new federal energy agency, William Simon.

The truckers have threatened a nationwide stoppage Dec. 13 and 14 to dramatize their plight.

Roads Clear

Interstate highways were reported clear of protesting truckers early Friday. But clusters of trucks which could quickly create new blockades were reported in several areas.

The truckers who have caused major tieups by blocking east-west interstate highways in Pennsylvania and Ohio were reported honoring requests from their leaders for a 24-hour moratorium to give talks with government officials in Washington time to gain results.

The Ohio Turnpike near Toledo was open to traffic, but truck traffic was restricted to prevent drivers from setting up new roadblocks.

A 32-mile section of the turnpike had been closed earlier in the day to keep truckers from congregating at a large truck stop near the intersection of Interstate 280 and the turnpike.

Gerald Warren, deputy White House press secretary, said Thursday the problems created by the blockades on interstate highways were headaches to be solved by the states and not the federal government.

J. W. "Rover Rat" Edwards, one of four truckers who met for three hours Thursday with Brinegar, asked truckers clustered in areas near the East Coast to honor the moratorium.

24-Hour Delay

Charles Pellegrino, a trucking industry journalist who also attended the meeting, said Thursday afternoon that a threatened blockade of Washington had been canceled for 24 hours to allow the talks with transportation officials to continue.

The truckers have variously threatened to shut down Washington and shut down their industry if their demands are not met. Among them are lower fuel prices, higher speed limits, unlimited use of highways, increased maximum weights, priority on fuel used by trucks and

Kelley Defends FBI's Assault on New Left

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Clarence Kelley Friday promised a full, detailed report on operations of a three-year program launched by the late J. Edgar Hoover "to expose, disrupt and otherwise neutralize" the New Left movement.

Kelley strongly defended the so-called counter-intelligence operation as a vital measure "to protect the fabric of our society."

Kelley promised the report to the attorney general, indicating that it would not be made public immediately, and offered no additional information about the program's activities.

Hoover established the nationwide operation on May 10, 1968, and terminated it on April 28, 1971.

Two memos describing the operation reluctantly were made public by the FBI Thursday, but an informed justice department source said the FBI possesses many other documents outlining specific activities on the nationwide attack.

This source said some of those documents "can't be found any more."

Targets Still Secret

In the two memos, Hoover did not identify specific targets but the source said the FBI worked from a still-secret list of organizations.

The operation included the use of agents provocateurs to infiltrate New Left groups and incite possibly violent activities, the source said.

One of the memos disclosed that the FBI has directed similar operations at black extremists, the Socialist Workers party, the Communist Party USA and "white hate groups," presumably the Ku Klux Klan.

The memo terminating the formal operations said FBI offices could request headquarters' approval for further counter-intelligence action "in exceptional instances."

Part of Plan

By releasing the two memos, the FBI acknowledged for the first time that a variety of previously reported activities were part of a systematic campaign ordered by Hoover.

The FBI released the memos only after acting Atty. Gen. Robert Bork chose not to appeal a federal court order commanding disclosure.

The court order came in a suit filed by NBC television newsman Carl Stern with the

Jump Not Blamed on Fuel Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate rose to 4.7 percent in November, up from 4.5 percent in October.

Economists doubted that the fuel shortage was a factor in the increase.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said that the number of people out of work increased by 200,000 last month, in a survey taken just a few weeks after the Arab oil embargo.

Herbert Stein, chairman of President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, said he did not regard the November figures as reflecting the consequences of the oil embargo.

Stein noted that separate reports on the jobless picture from business establishments, also collected by the bureau, showed an increase of 200,000 jobs in November. The difference between the statistics, he said, "makes it impossible to say what happened in the labor market in November."

Economists think the first impact of the oil embargo will be seen in the December figures and grow worse in January.

6 Percent Next Year?

The Nixon administration has predicted that the unemployment rate will rise to almost six percent next year as the embargo begins to chill economic growth and forces more people from their jobs.

While total employment held steady at 85.7 million, the number of people out of work rose by 200,000 to 4.3 million. This figure is expected to climb to well over five million next year.

It seemed clear that the October jobless rate of 4.5 percent may be the lowest the nation will see for some time.

The increase occurred mainly among adult women and men aged 16 to 24.

It was centered among blue collar and service workers, with the rate for blue-collar workers rising from 5.1 to 5.5 percent and for service workers from 5.1 to 6 percent.

Job Loss

The bureau said the unemployment rise was accounted for primarily by job loss. As a result, it said, the percentage of the unemployed who had lost their last job increases substantially from 1.6 percent to 1.9 percent of the labor force.

The jobless rate for adult women climbed from 4.4 percent to 4.7 percent.

For household heads the jobless rate rose from 4.4 to 4.7 percent.

Bar Assn. Head Criticizes Probe Result

By Roland Krekeler

The president of the Linn County Bar Assn. has criticized the result of County Atty. William Faches' investigation of the police department.

The investigation, which consisted of interviewing 55 witnesses under oath during six days of the last several months, reached its climax Thursday with a public report critical of some activities of the department.

In addition, Safety Commissioner John Oberthorn told The Gazette Friday he does not believe his defeat in the November election was the county attorney's aim in undertaking the investigation.

As reported in The Gazette Thursday, prior to formal release of the report, Faches indicated no charges will be filed against police personnel now even though the county attorney uncovered what he believes is criminal activity.

David Elderkin, who heads the bar association, when asked for comments, particularly on Faches' suggestion that the association set up a criminal justice committee, made this statement:

Report Is Serious

"Mr. Faches' report is serious, and I am disturbed by its implications. I am, like wise, puzzled by its generality.

"Its vagueness implicates by innuendo and association a whole department, most of them, at least, fine and dedicated and often unappreciated men.

"Likewise, if criminal acts have been committed, as Mr. Faches states or strongly implies, he has a sworn duty to file appropriate charges. He does not, quite frankly, have the statutory authority to criticize and then either forgive or ignore.

"As to his proposal to the Linn County Bar Assn., this will be received, submitted to the board of governors of the bar association and given immediate and serious consideration."

Other recommendations in the report are:

That state legislation be passed to make it a criminal act " . . . for any member of any law enforcement agency to take part, or conspire with anyone else, to violate in a flagrant, willful and premeditated manner, the constitutional rights of persons protected under the United States and Iowa state constitutions."

That the grand jury conduct periodic, thorough investigations of jails to ascertain if electronic listening devices are in use. That various police officials be asked periodically to report, under oath, about safeguards being taken to insure persons are not being deprived of constitutional rights.

Emphasized Rights

Faches' report emphasized the constitutional rights of some defendants were violated by police during breakins and attempted breakins in searches for evidence.

He said such rights also were violated by electronic eavesdropping on conversations between suspects and

One of those, Gulf, said an increase of 0.2 cents per gallon is coming next week.

Of the remaining four without increases, two said they are expecting increases yet this month. The other two said they had no word of any increase, but added they were not notified of earlier increases until the day they took effect.

Range of Increases

Only two of the increases were three cents per gallon or more. Only two were less than one cent per gallon.

Haycraft was not alone in his criticism of the current cost of living council standards. The council implemented the current standards Nov. 1 after station owners protested vigorously over having to absorb all wholesale price increases.

Still Restricted

The stations still can't increase retail prices to cover other expenses, such as increasing labor, water, heating, lighting, phone and gas bills, he said.

He advocated the government taking its hands off the price structure. "If the government was not involved, there would have been natural increases," he claimed.

—Police Probe—

their attorneys in rooms at police headquarters.

He said some of the break-ins also involved violations of state statutes, but he does not intend to bring charges against the violators at this time.

He explained that he believes it is more important to get out to the public the constitutional violations. This could not have been done if those interviewed thought they would be prosecuted.

Charges in Future?

He is not eliminating the possibility of charges if information about further break-ins is brought to his attention. He said his active seeking of evidence is completed, but he is not closing the investigation in case further information is brought to his attention.

The report said his investigation has not shaken his belief that the police department is one of the finest in the country.

Faches said he is about 100 percent sure from his investigation that Oberthien did not know anything about the serious constitutional violations, such as break-ins and electronic eavesdropping.

Concerning Oberthien's personal actions, Faches said he "should not comment about that any more than I have on others."

City Election

During the city election campaign, Oberthien requested a state attorney general review of the investigation.

He claimed both he and the police department had been "smeared daily" by publicity in connection with the probe and asked the attorney general to state if any criminal wrongdoing had been uncovered.

Oberthien said Friday he still believes the investigation was politically motivated against him, but that Faches was used by other parties rather than himself seeing Oberthien's defeat.

The Gazette revealed during the campaign that Faches had attempted to persuade State Sen. Cloyd Robinson (D-C.R.) to run against Oberthien.

Be Replaced

Faches was quoted as saying Oberthien should be replaced for the good of the community, but he denied his investigation was being used as a tool to provide unfavorable publicity against Oberthien.

In his report Thursday Faches said some overzealous members of the department violated the constitutional rights of citizens. He said four incidents of breaking or attempts to break-in implicated about a dozen officers.

He said orders came from persons in command positions. He said reports of a plumber's squad carrying out the break-ins might be misleading since different detectives were involved in different cases.

The report indicated there may have been at least 15 to 20 break-ins or attempts, but there was no conclusive evidence on them.

1969 Murder Case

In addition to the break-in in the 1969 murder case, reported in The Gazette Thursday, the report said evidence showed there was a break-in that unsuccessfully tried to implicate a local business in the fencing of certain items.

The report also referred to attempted break-ins in the still unsolved Maureen Farley murder about two years ago, and at a building in which a municipal court judge had an interest during investigation of the court several years ago.

Concerning reports that some officers look evidence after cases were closed or when the owner could not be found, Faches said about ten instances came to light, but no criminal intent was involved.

Few Involved

There were "a very few officers" involved in larcenies while on duty, who were discharged in lieu of being charged, according to the report. That disposition apparently was made to avoid bad publicity, it said.

One time in a case involving less than $1 the officer was allowed to remain on the force.

Concerning the voiding of traffic tickets, the report claimed it was done at least one time against the officer's will and that other tickets were voided, but there is no implication it is "an everyday experience."

As to possible irregularities in servicing private autos, Faches said there is insufficient evidence to indicate criminal action and he is recommending internal investigation concerning possible improprieties.

Criminal Activity

No criminal activity was uncovered in investigation of altering of reports although there was some alteration, according to the county attorney.

FBI reports and information for annual reports involved untruths, but otherwise there were no untruths in investigative reports, the investigation showed.

Alteration of other reports usually involved including additional detail, Faches claimed, and one report was altered to include another person's opinion on what happened when public property was destroyed at an intersection. There was no fraudulent purpose in the case, he said.

FBI Reports

In the last year or two, FBI reports were changed so they did not accurately reflect the crime picture in the city, the investigation showed.

Faches said disregard for the Constitution shown by some officers is "the first step toward totalitarian government and tyranny."

"If a person apprehended for a crime does not even have the guarantee of conferring with his attorney in privacy while he is being held in custody, then there is no question in my mind the system of government envisioned by our forefathers is beginning to erode into some other type of government."

"It goes against the very grain of my belief and faith in our government, and people who indulge in this type of activity should in some way be made to understand this type of activity shall not be tolerated."

Overriding Issue

Concerning failure to bring any charges, he said "the overriding issue is to prevent future violations." He said he has been assured by Acting Police Chief Jerry Clift that the electronic equipment for eavesdropping on defendants and their attorneys has been removed.

He said he has been assured "new administrative attitudes have been and are being taken to avoid recurrence."

He said one reason for not naming names in the report was he does not want undue publicity in case there is prosecution later.

Asked whether James Steinbeck, safety commissioner-elect and former detective, came through the investigation with a clean bill of health Faches said:

"I wouldn't want to comment on that. He can speak for himself. He should talk to the press... if he feels it necessary." Steinbeck could not be reached for comment.

Charges Earlier?

When Faches was asked whether he had been about ready to file charges a month ago, as had
