Senator: Student aid inadequate

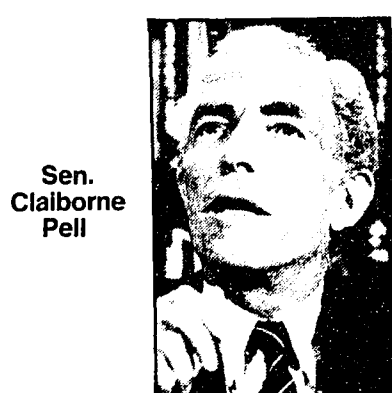

By Lyle Muller

Gazette Johnson County Bureau
IOWA CITY — The nation's student aid programs have not kept up adequately with increasing college costs, a U.S. senator responsible for some of those programs told a group of Big Ten university student leaders Saturday. (Related story on page 4B.)

"Many of our nation's most deserving young people are being priced out of college," Sen. Claiborne Pell said during a session of the Student Big Ten Conference, hosted this weekend in Iowa City by the University of Iowa Student Senate.

Pell is chairman of the Senate Education subcommittee and was a key figure in the establishment of federal student aid programs in the 1960s and 1970s. National Pell grants available to college students are named after Pell, a Rhode Island Democrat.

The federal government reversed its policies on student aid in the 1980s, shifting from grants to loans, and from offering more money to offering less, Pell said Saturday.

Neither grants nor loans are helping students as much as needed and loans strap students with debt, he said.

For example, a Pell grant in 1980 covered about 40 percent of a student's average tuition, while the grant now covers only about 28 percent, he said.

"College costs have risen 93 percent since 1980. During that same period, the relative value of public student aid has decreased."

This weekend's conference at the U of I is the first to bring together student leaders from all of the Big Ten universities to explore the issues facing higher education providers.

"This conference comes at a particularly useful time because we are at a crossroads in education," Pell said.

More than 400 students and teachers are attending the conference.

Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad attended the conference Saturday and said at a noon luncheon he thinks major problems on American college campuses can be solved by people who get a solid education and become leaders.

"It's a process that must begin early in life and, in some cases, requires us to provide a head start for disadvantaged young people," Branstad told about 130 listeners.

"I know that there's still discrimination and there's still unfairness in the world," he said. "It is our responsibility to do something about that. But I would also suggest that the way to accomplish those things is to work through the system."

NEWS NOTES/EASTERN IOWA

C.R. police are still looking for clues

■ Cedar Rapids police are continuing today to search for clues in the murder Friday of Brian Schappert, an assistant manager of the Kum and Go Convenience Store, 2743 Mount Vernon Rd. SE.

The Detective Bureau has taken many telephone calls in response to publication of a police sketch of a possible suspect wanted for questioning, and to the description of the white van with no side windows seen in the area.

Police described the man as white, in his mid 20s, approximately 6 feet tall, 170 pounds, with shoulder-length, dark brown hair, and two to three days' growth of beard. He was wearing a dark sweater and jeans.

The van is possibly an early 1970s model.

According to police, Schappert, 22, of 1715 Memorial Dr. SE, was found lying near the storeroom of the store. His body was found by a cab driver who had stopped for gas.

Schappert was pronounced dead at approximately 3:30 a.m. Friday. Police believe the motive was robbery. Cash was taken from the cash drawer and the safe in the storeroom.

3 motorists killed on Iowa roadways

■ At least two people have died on Iowa highways so far this weekend, and a third was found dead Friday after an accident that apparently happened sometime three days earlier.

Jasper County sheriff's authorities said Mark VandeKieft, 37, of Prairie City, died when he ran a stop sign and pulled his car into the path of a car driven by George Fowler of Grinnell, on U.S. 6 near Kellogg Friday night.

Bremer County authorities said Norman Schoop, 45, of Ottumwa, died when he drove his motorcycle across the center line and struck a semi-trailer truck on Highway 63 near Waverly Friday night.

And in a separate wreck near Greene, Michael Moser, 34, of Greene, was killed when he apparently lost control of his motorcycle and left a county road. The body was discovered Friday morning but Butler County authorities speculated the accident happened on Tuesday. Moser was not wearing a helmet.

$750,000 bond filed in sex abuse case

■ BENNETT — Mark Travis Knight of Bennett has been accused of taking a juvenile female to a city park and sexually abusing her, according to the Cedar County Sheriff's Department. Knight, 21, is charged with first-degree kidnapping and second-degree sexual abuse.

He was being held in the Cedar County Jail last night on $750,000 bond. The age of the female wasn't released.

Former Iowans returned to face murder charges

From Gazette staff reports

MANCHESTER — Two former Waterloo residents apprehended in Florida for the murder of a Waterloo man near Delhi 10 years ago are in Iowa jails today.

Jessie B. Wilson, 43, and Barbara Ann Wilson, 47, were returned Friday night to Delaware County by officials of Delaware County Sheriff's Department and the Iowa Department of Criminal Investigation, the Delaware County Sheriff's Department said.

The couple were arraigned before a Delaware County magistrate at the Delaware County courthouse at Manchester. Both are charged with murder in the first degree and are being held under $1 million bond each. The Wilsons are charged in connection with the death of James Barnes, 46, a former Waterloo city employee, who was found shot to death near Delhi in Delaware County on Nov. 17, 1978. Barnes apparently died of multiple gunshot wounds to the head with a .38 caliber handgun.

Jesse Wilson is being held in the Delaware County Jail and Barbara Ann Wilson was taken to the Dubuque County Jail, where she will be held.

The Wilsons, who went by several aliases, were sought by authorities since November 1978. They were arrested Aug. 28 by FBI agents at Miami International Airport and waived extradition Aug. 31.

CAN MEDICATION BE SHARED?

As funeral directors, we are concerned with the health of bereaved people, both emotional and physical. It is for this reason that we feel compelled to warn those friends and relatives of the bereaved of the dangers of "sharing" tranquilizers with them.

We realize this is often done in the spirit of caring and with all good intentions. But physicians warn that prescription medicine should never be taken by anyone for whom it was not prescribed.

There's another reason, too. Noted theologian Paul Tillich says the use of medication to alleviate the pain felt by bereaved people may actually slow the process of recovering from their grief. Often, Tillich writes, sedation merely delays the reaction until a later time; then, there may not be a group of supportive people present to help the person through it. We invite your comments and questions.
