—Injured woman—

Cedar Rapids native and graduate of Wilson High School, that his daughter sustained a severe bruise to the brain stem.

"The doctor said it's not hopeless, but every day she remains in a coma, the longer it'll be. We've still got that hope to cling to. The doctor said it's between Patty and God."

The air ambulance, being flown to Cedar Rapids from California, is scheduled to leave at about 10 a.m. this morning.

Mercy Administrator Bernard Grahek said the hospital's decision to cancel Patty's bill was not a common thing, but Mercy has done it for other patients in need.

"They don't have the funds. She taught in a Christian school and she left that job to come to Cedar Rapids to try and find a job here at the hospital," Grahek said.

"The job she had didn't pay much so she dropped her insurance. There's no county assistance available because she hasn't established a residence, and the county where her parents live in California can't help because she isn't a dependent."

"As for the air ambulance donations, one person heard of this situation and she went to her friends and told them about it. It's a legitimate cause and a good human endeavor on the part of many who want to help their fellow man. It's that simple."

Tschopp said he will be told at a later date who donated the $5,000.

"They said they'd let me know sometime in the future. I want to be able to thank them in person."

"I know Patty will want to know. She'll want to come back to Cedar Rapids and meet the people who helped her."

—Korean probe—

Jaworski was hired to succeed Lacobara amid assurances he would encounter no such trouble. He resigned Wednesday after Congress refused to go along with his efforts to pressure South Korea into producing Kim as a witness.

His resignation had hardly become public when Flynt announced the Koreans had agreed to let the panel send written questions to Kim concerning allegations that, as ambassador to Washington, he made cash payments to members of Congress on behalf of the Seoul government.

Under the arrangement, Kim would not reply under oath nor face direct questioning from investigators.

Asked what he thought of this arrangement, Jaworski snapped, "It isn't sufficient."

Jaworski reported to the House on June 19 that he had rejected a similar offer from the Seoul government to turn over written answers to his questions because Korean officials refused to assure that the replies would be under oath.

He said Flynt had not supported his efforts to pressure South Korea to cooperate and that the chairman had voted against some of those moves on the House floor.

—Thorpe charged—sexual relationship in the early 1960s.

"I'm being hounded by people just because of my sexual relationship with Jeremy Thorpe," he said in court then.

In the autumn of 1975, police were called to investigate the shooting of Scott's great dane, Rinka, at a lonely spot on the Exmoor hills southwest of London.

In March 1976, Andrew Gino Newton, a former airline pilot, was convicted of shooting the dog and served a year in prison. When he was released last year, he claimed he had been paid $9,500 by Liberal Party leaders to murder Scott.

Director of Public Prosecutions Tony Hetherington immediately ordered a fresh investigation into the charges by Scott, who now lives in an isolated cottage in the Dartmoor hills and trains horses. The inquiry was completed in June.

The three others charged with Thorpe were David Holmes, 46, a Manchester businessman and best man at Thorpe's first wedding, John Le Mesurier, 44, a businessman, and George Deakin, 35, a night club owner, both from South Wales.

Thorpe's first wife, Caroline, by whom he had a son, was killed in a car crash. His second wife, Marion, is the former wife of Queen Elizabeth's cousin, the Earl of Harewood.

The case has become the biggest British political scandal since the 1963 sex-and-spies furor that drove War Minister John Profumo from office and threatened to topple the Conservative government of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

—Cult leader—

David, a 6-foot-4, 300-pound religious fanatic who was under investigation by the FBI for possible mail fraud, committed suicide Monday by inhaling carbon monoxide from a borrowed van.

Salt Lake City police said they had kept David under surveillance for several years because he frequently contacted Mormon Church leaders, who had excommunicated him, and demanded that they pay him all tithing collected from members of the faith.

"Church security was a little worried about them because two of his disciples were karate experts and all of them were knife makers," said Detective Sgt. Brent Davis. "I viewed him as more of a threat to himself than to others."

Skip Daynes, who owns a downtown music store and said he was probably David's closest friend, said that Mrs. David appeared confused and lost after he told her Wednesday of the suicide.

"She was worried about how she would care for the children," Daynes said. "She was confused and lost. She talked about finding a job, but she didn't know what she could do. She refused to go to social agencies for help. That was against her religion."

Daynes said David was negotiating to buy two $47,000 pianos and a $1 million house in the wealthy Walker Lane area of Salt Lake County.

"He couldn't come up with the money for the down payment on the house," said Daynes. "It was due on July 31st. He had failed his children and that may be why he decided to lay down his life."

Authorities were still trying to determine how David was able to afford the spacious hotel suite where his family was living. Hotel manager James Bradley told investigators David had paid more than $30,000 in hotel and food bills, mostly in cash day-by-day. The meals were catered from a fancy French restaurant.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Steve Snarr said he believed followers of David may have given him money. One follower was convicted in May for raising $8,000 in four months by wiring friends and relatives that he needed money, Snarr said.

David, who changed his name from Bruce Longo in 1970, was the son of a Yonkers, N.Y., doctor, Frank Antony Longo, who died in 1969, according to the Westchester County (N.Y.) Medical Society. His brother and mother live in Vero Beach, Fla.

He attended Brigham Young University and met his wife, a native of Sweden, there.

Cheryl Williams, a clerk at Salt Lake's Ramada Inn, where the family stayed for a while, said David claimed to have silver mines in Sweden and would call long distance to that country when he needed money.

After a stint in the Army, David joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

He was excommunicated in 1969, and three years later wrote a letter of apology to then-church President Harold Lee that was published in the Mormon "Church News."

Although the children never attended school, police Detective Carl Volles said "they were very intelligent."

"Gathering from the books we found in the rooms, they were well-read and probably more advanced than others their age."

Congress OK's weapons measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress gave final approval Friday to a $37 billion weapons bill that includes authorization for a giant, nuclear aircraft carrier and a test program to convert civilian jumbo jets to carry cruise missiles.

The bill, a compromise between Senate and House versions, contains $20.6 million for the cruise missile plane experiment.

The authorization measure was passed by the House during the morning and then by the Senate early in the evening.

Second arrested in burglary

Cedar Rapids police have arrested a second man on a charge of second degree burglary in connection with items taken from a northeast side home July 30.

Carlos L. Isaac, 22, of 207 15th St. SE, Apt. C, was arrested and jailed Friday afternoon in connection with a report by Connie Saldivar of 4901 Center Point Road NE of the burglary of a color television, stereo equipment and jewelry. The items were valued at more than $2,000.

Steven A. White, 18, of the same address, was arrested Thursday on the same charge.

Neighbors call meeting about abandoned house

Neighborhood residents plan to meet with city officials Monday over the lack of action on a burned and abandoned house at 423 J Ave. NW. The 4 p.m. meeting is scheduled to be held at the abandoned building.

Owned by Tony Nemer, 1425 Seventh Ave. SE, the house burned in December 1977.

Mary Carnahan, of 416 J Ave. NW, spokesperson for "Timecheck Citizens for a Voice in Community Action," said that last spring a petition requesting demolition of the building was taken to Safety Commissioner Floyd Bergen. The neighborhood group claims no action was taken.

They demand that action be taken immediately to demolish and clear the house which they say is both a danger and a blight on the neighborhood.

Bergen, contacted Friday, said city building official Ed Winter has

Mugging fatal to woman, 90

DAVENPORT (AP) — A 90-year-old Davenport woman died late Thursday from injuries sustained in a purse snatching incident at the home where she had lived since almost the turn of the century.

Authorities said Clara Schiele was attacked by a man wearing a nylon mask over his face as she climbed the steps to her home after a shopping trip about 2 p.m. Thursday.

Police said the assailant pushed Miss Schiele down and ran off with the $20 from her purse.

Miss Schiele reportedly struck her head on the concrete steps, but refused medical attention until later in the afternoon. She then was taken to a Davenport hospital where she died from a skull fracture and internal injuries about 10 hours after the mugging.

Police described her assailant as a black male. They said no arrests have been made.

Only a spark needed to ignite gas: Marshal

FORT MADISON (AP) — Vernet Burgdorf looked at the smoldering farmstead where his mother and stepfather died in a propane pipeline explosion and fireball that were felt and seen for miles.

"It was like a holocaust. A series of explosions. First a big one, then a smaller one."

His mother, Claricy Knight, 82, and her husband Robert Knight Sr., 79, died shortly after midnight Friday when the propane line ruptured about 100 yards from their two-story farmhouse.

Six others were injured, three critically.

The explosion leveled the Knight home and six farm buildings. It damaged two nearby homes, including Burgdorf's.

The blast and flames also hit the Robert Rider residence about 200 yards southeast of the Knight home.

Rider, 54, his wife Mary, 49, and their daughter Cindy, 23, were in critical condition at University Hospitals in Iowa City, with burns.

The explosion occurred when an eight-inch trunk line owned by Mid-America Pipeline Co. of Tulsa, Okla., ruptured in a cornfield which runs past several houses about six miles west of Fort Madison.

The escaping, odorless gas settled into low-lying areas. It ignited and exploded, setting off a chain reaction of blasts and fires.

"It would be folly to try to pinpoint what ignited the gas," said Assistant State Fire Marshal Reynold Hentges, as he trudged through the rubble of the Knight house.

"It could have been anything... All it takes is a little spark."

Brad Dunbar, Washington spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, said a federal investigation began almost immediately, and two pipeline safety specialists were dispatched to Fort Madison.

Authorities said it was about six weeks ago that the pipeline was lowered as part of the road-widening work on Highway 2.

Gilbert Rohlader, senior vice president of Mid-America's pipeline division in Tulsa, said, "The pressure was normal then. And at that time we added some more covering and casing to the pipeline," Rohlader said.

Bus plunges into lake

EASTMAN, Quebec (AP) — A bus carrying 45 handicapped persons plunged into a lake Friday night. Police said several had drowned but did not give a figure.

Divers were on the scene, Lac d'Argent, about 50 miles southeast of Montreal.

The passengers were on a tour of the area when the accident occurred.

Flash flood smashes Texas town; dam weak

ALBANY, Texas (UPI) — A flash flood sent a 20-foot wall of water over this small ranching community of 2,000 Friday, leaving soaked survivors stranded on rooftops, trees, oil derricks and floating pickup trucks.

Floodwaters also threatened to smash the earthen reservoir dam at Throckmorton 40 miles to the north, forcing authorities to evacuate the threatened town of 1,200.

At least six persons were killed in Albany, raising the death toll to 23 in this week's flash flooding in the state.

The state Department of Public Safety said water was running over Lake Throckmorton Dam as new rain clouds added to the 18-inch rainfall the town received overnight.

A National Weather Service team was en route to the dam to test its strength.

"We still have our fingers crossed," said DPS Capt. J.E. Gray. "That dam is above the entire town so if it should go we may have a lot of people in trouble. We don't know for sure how much of the town is evacuated."

He quoted the Soil Conservation Service as predicting the dam would collapse. "Hopefully, they will be wrong," he said. "But the situation is pretty grave now."

"Water is over the spillway at Lake Throckmorton and is moving eastward down Elm Creek," a National Weather Service spokesman in Wichita Falls said. "Residents and motorists are urged to exercise extreme caution until the problems at the lake dam have been resolved."

Authorities said more than a dozen persons were missing in Friday's most recent river rampage in west central Texas. Another 14 were still missing in the south central hill country, some 250 miles away.

A NWS spokesman in Fort Worth blamed the flood on an overnight rainfall of up to 18 inches which produced "a wall of water reported to have been 20 feet high."

The water began to recede shortly before noon, but light rain was falling and more heavy rain was forecast through this morning.

Committee to study Iowa Guard

DES MOINES (AP) — House Speaker Dale Cochran, D-Eagle Grove, Friday appointed seven state representatives to investigate alleged misuse of tax dollars and equipment by members of the Iowa National Guard.

"The Legislature has a constitutional responsibility to the people of Iowa to oversee state appropriations and actions," Cochran said.

"A number of irregularities have been alleged in Guard actions and by this investigation we are living up to our duty of legislative oversight," he said.

Cochran said the committee will have such investigative powers such as the right to subpoena witnesses and take testimony under oath at its hearings.

Appointed to the committee were Reps. Bill Monroe, D-Burlington, temporary chairman; Norman Jesse, D-Des Moines; Joe Rinas, D-Marion; Fred Koogler, D-Oskaloosa; Andrew Varley, R-Stuart; Doug Smallley, R-Des Moines; and Betty Hoffman, R-Muscatine.

The committee will operate until it completes its work or until Jan. 8, 1979.
