Legislative leaders enjoy challenges

By John Kirsch
Gazette political writer

DES MOINES — Bob Arnould and Jack Rife say the budgetary challenges of the legislative session that ended early Sunday did not dim their enthusiasm for the leadership roles they assumed this year.

Arnould, a Davenport Democrat, took over in January as House speaker, succeeding Don Avenson, the longest-serving speaker.

Rife, a Moscow Republican, succeeded Cal Hultman as Senate minority leader.

Budgetary problems have marked the legislative session that Arnould and Rife helped lead. Lawmakers tried to eliminate deficits, which required cuts in popular spending programs, and a 5 cent increase in the state cigarette tax.

The task has been especially challenging for Arnould, who narrowly defeated Dubuque Democrat Tom Jochum in a heated speaker's race.

Rep. Gene Blanshan, D-Scranton, praised Arnould, saying he did an exceptional job, particularly in light of the tight budget.

Blanshan said part of Arnould's challenge has been in overcoming comparisons with Avenson, who critics say ruled the House with a heavy hand for eight years.

"Bob Arnould believes in shared power. Don was someone who sucked power toward him," Blanshan said.

THE FAVORABLE reviews for Arnould were not unanimous.

Iowa part of welfare-reform project

By Rod Boshart
Gazette Des Moines Bureau

DES MOINES — Iowa will be one of three states participating in a welfare-reform project aimed at helping public-assistance recipients become better financial managers, said Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, D-Audubon.

State lawmakers included $75,000 in their $3.3 billion fiscal 1992 budget to enter into a three-state agreement with a Washington-based firm that will conduct the special approach with officials in Iowa, Oregon and Mississippi, Hutchins said.

The project is designed to help people on public assistance learn how to save money, he said. Included are public-private incentives for participants to set aside part of their paychecks aimed at helping them manage their finances and eventually break the welfare cycle.

"It's a unique approach to try and address some of the long-term welfare-reform issues," said Hutchins.

Rep. William Harbor, R-Henderson, a former speaker and 29-year legislative veteran, said Arnould "leaves the feeling among a lot of people, myself included, that he's just a little hesitant. Maybe it's because his predecessor was so forceful and almost to the point of being a little too much so."

But Harbor said Arnould has been more willing to share power than Avenson.

"I think I'm effective in a quieter way than Don Avenson was," Arnould said. "I don't think that's a negative. There are many styles of leadership and in the end, one ought to be judged on their record of accomplishments."

Arnould said lawmakers made progress on education, the environment and other issues, despite falling revenues.

"You do whatever you have to do to get the job done," he said.

Rife assumed leadership of a Senate GOP caucus that picked up seats in last year's election. Despite that gain, Republicans are in the minority.

"It's been a challenge for me," he said. "You've got to look out for them and keep them all in the flock and make sure nobody goes astray and gets eaten up by the big bad wolf."

Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, D-Audubon, said Rife has done a good job in his new position and praised him for working with Democrats on the state budget.

"It's been probably as tough a year as you could come in as a new leader," Hutchins said.

What Legislature didn't do

- Reinstate a limited death penalty requested by Gov. Terry Branstad.
- Adopt restrictions to laws governing legal abortions or pregnancy terminations.
- Toughen Iowa's drunken driving laws by lowering the legal blood alcohol standard or imposing a 30-day driver's license suspension for first-time offenders that Branstad requested.
- Shield rape victims' names and addresses from access to the media and public.
- Lift religious exemptions pertaining to medical treatment and other health services for minors or dependent adults.
- Change the length of legislative terms in office or adopt a "none of these candidates" election option for voters.

- Raise salaries for top elected and appointed state officials.

- Approve $1 million that Branstad requested to begin planning a prison expansion in Clarinda but did provide nearly $10 million to open and operate 902 new prison cells.

- Attach a taxpayers' rights amendment to the Iowa Constitution.
- Increase fines for knowingly disposing of solid waste at an unpermitted disposal site.
- Tighten surveillance of sex offenders.
- Enhance protections for grain dealers.
- Create buffer zones around state parks and other public-use areas.

- Divide the state Department of Natural Resources into two state agencies.

- Require that local government committees be gender-balanced.

- Create agriculture enterprise zones to encourage livestock and intense farming in certain areas.

- Include funding for a statewide telecommunications network in next year's budget.

- Implement a $22.5 million commitment in property tax replacement targeted for family farmers and low-income and elderly renters.

- Take action on Branstad's $2.7 million proposal to increase teacher's base pay from $18,000 to $20,000.

roommate from Florida who was 'dude' this and 'dude' that. Across the hall was a student from Sweden and a guy from Milan, Italy. I would never have met those people if I'd stayed home."

At school Wagor takes a lot of sciences; and calculus, "a total nightmare." He thought at one time he'd like to go into veterinary medicine as a career, but found he had a lot of allergies. Then their cat was hit by a car and got a compound fracture, and he decided he didn't want to do anything directly related to trauma. He is still considering medicine, but would rather be in a specialty where he doesn't have to deal with pain, where he can put his patients to sleep and fix what's wrong.

Whatever he decides to do as a career, music will remain a part of his life, he said. He finds himself picking out the bass part in whatever music he listens to, whether it's Wagner or Thelonious Monk or Dire Straits.

Bass-playing can be an expensive hobby, though. He would like to move up to a better quality bass before he goes to the University of Iowa next year, but it could cost $7,000 to get one better than he's got. He owns two, one bought from a former teacher and the other, a $30 find from an estate sale. After putting hundreds into rebuilding it, it's probably worth $2,500 now, he said. Now he'll find out if he has any talent in another area — "I think I'm going to have to start wheeling and dealing," he said.

The music is worth it. "It gives me a way to express myself. In math you're either right or wrong. In music, no one can really tell you you're right or wrong."

Lotto jackpots survive to Wednesday

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa Lotto and Lotto America jackpots will grow after no one claimed either prize this weekend.

Lotto America will climb to an estimated $8 million for Wednesday's from Saturday's $5.8 million prize, lottery officials said Sunday.

The numbers drawn Saturday night were: 14, 17, 39, 40, 46 and 51.

The Multi-State Lottery Association said a check of lottery computers showed 63 tickets matched five of the numbers and are worth $1,156 each. An additional 3,600 tickets with four numbers are worth $48.

The Iowa Lotto jackpot will be worth an estimated $1.6 million for Wednesday's drawing after no ticket matched this weekend's numbers, officials said.

The jackpot stood at $1.5 million Saturday when these numbers were drawn: 5, 12, 17, 18, 28 and 34.

Officials said 14 tickets matched five numbers and are worth $600 each and that an additional 576 tickets matched four numbers for a prize of $30 each.

There were 8,286 tickets that matched three and may be exchanged for a free play.

Officials said a total of $35,760 was won by the holders of 1,310 tickets that matched Saturday's wild card, the six of diamonds.

Saturday's Daily Deal cards were the six of hearts, the jack of clubs, the 10 of diamonds and the king of spades.

Man 'serious' after falling from skywalk

A Marion man was in serious condition last night after he fell from a downtown skywalk Saturday night.

Cedar Rapids police were called to the 100 block of Third Street NE, where they found 20-year-old Jay Brandt lying on the concrete under the skywalk shortly before midnight.

Officers discovered a broken window in the skywalk connected to the Five Seasons Hotel and are treating the incident as accidental, although the investigation will continue.

Brandt was taken to St. Luke's Hospital, where a spokesman said last night that he was in serious condition.
