Governor favors forger

BOSTON (AP) — Now it can be told. There's a forger working in Gov. Michael S. Dukakis' office. And the governor is in favor of it.

Mild-mannered Capitol Police Sgt. Arthur Beaulieu has mastered Dukakis' signature in an attempt to save the governor from the ravages of writer's cramp.

Beaulieu, a plain-clothes guard in the governor's outer lobby at the State House, not only has been signing gubernatorial proclamations, citations and personal notes for months, but also has been autographing photographs of Dukakis that are sent to gubernatorial admirers.

When a Dukakis staffer resigned recently, he was presented with a special proclamation honoring him for past accomplishments. It was signed by Arthur Beaulieu, "a-x-a Michael S. Dukakis."

Despite his helpfulness, Beaulieu does not have access to Dukakis' personal checkbook.

"No way," an aide said, with a barely visible smile.
