Branstad, Junkins disagree on whether budget cuts are likely

By Judy Daubenmier

Gazette Des Moines Bureau

DES MOINES — Iowa's two gubernatorial candidates clashed over the condition of the state treasury Wednesday in separate appearances before a group of government administrators.

Democratic candidate Lowell Junkins warned the administrators that they face a "November surprise" from incumbent Republican Gov. Terry Branstad in the form of more state budget cuts as soon as the election is over.

He claimed the state is running a $70 million budget deficit that could grow to $140 million, necessitating spending curbs.

But Branstad, who has cut state budgets across-the-board twice, maintained no more such cuts will be necessary.

"I don't believe it's going to be necessary again because of the reorganization and downsizing we've had in state government and because the economic development efforts we're making have begun to pay off," he said.

Revenue is "achieving expectations" for this year, he said.

The two candidates, in separate appearances before the Iowa chapter of the American Society for Public Administration, also presented differing views of the reorganization of state government proposed by Branstad and approved by the Legislature this spring.

The governor called the reorganization of state government into 24 state agencies "one of the most significant changes in state government in the history of our state."

He repeated his earlier claims that it will save $40 million a year in state administrative costs.

But Junkins termed it a "52-card shuffle" of government agencies that was done for political reasons and without analyzing whether all the reorganized services were necessary. The true savings, he claimed, will be less than $4 million.

"The reorganization bill was a Trojan horse rolled up in front of Iowans to warm our political hearts," he said.

"We now have a government that was put together in 150 years, taken apart and put back together in 50 days."

Branstad defended the reorganization process, saying it was done carefully and will make state bureaucracies more accountable.

He also discounted the possibility that the new Office of Management's power to prevent agency heads from filling vacant positions could make it impossible for administrators to carry out their responsibilities.

If the positions are "critical," Branstad said, the administrators should be able to persuade the office to fill them.

The two candidates also differed on the condition of the state economy, with Branstad maintaining that the economic development "seeds" he has planted have begun to "sprout."

Junkins, meanwhile, charged that Iowa is "shrinking" as Iowans continue to leave the state to find jobs elsewhere.

In other areas:

- Both candidates all but ruled out an increase in the state sales tax, with each saying the state should reform its income tax before raising the 4 percent sales tax.

- They split on the need for a "super board" representing all levels of education, with Junkins saying he would bring all levels of education together in January and Branstad saying he wants to wait until a Legislature-mandated study on education is completed later this fall.

'Autumn Gold' lottery game is now officially under way

AMES (AP) — Thanks to the success of the "7-11-21" instant lottery game, some retailers sold all of their tickets and began selling tickets in the new game last weekend, four days before Wednesday's official start.

"In general, we don't approve of selling tickets until a game has officially started," said lottery Director Ed Stanek. But the previous game sold out — the first one to do so — so the lottery was faced with letting retailers sell the new tickets prematurely or sell no tickets at all.

The new instant lottery game, inaugurated at Iowa State University Wednesday, is called "Autumn Gold" and will be touted in commercials by Iowa native Roger Williams, who gained fame with his song, "Autumn Leaves."

Stanek said Williams didn't charge much for the use of his name and services. "It was very little," Stanek said. He said Williams was approached about the promotion when he performed at the Iowa State Fair this summer. "To our delight, he complied," Stanek said.

The game has a top prize of $50,000 — more than the maximum $21,000 in the previous game but lower than the highest instant prize of $86,000 in a game this summer. The possible prizes are a free ticket, $2, $10, $100, $250, $500 and $25,000, with the prizes doubled on cards with a gold coin.

Shooting ruled an accident

A 13-year-old Cedar Rapids boy accidentally shot himself to death Sunday night, Linn County Medical Examiner Dr. Percy Harris has ruled.

Police were called to the Les and Carol Abodeely home, 374 30th St. SE, at 10:26 p.m. Sunday and found Jeffrey Schirm, 13, of the same address, sitting on the floor in a rear bedroom with a head wound from a five-shot .38 caliber revolver. He died a short time later at St. Luke's Hospital.

The revolver and a speed-loading device with four cartridges in it were found near the boy. One spent cartridge case was found in the weapon's chamber, according to a police report.

Files 3rd appeal of murder ruling

A Maquoketa man has filed a third challenge to his 1981 first-degree murder conviction.

Clayton Manning, 33, is serving a life sentence in the Iowa Penitentiary at Fort Madison in the Jan. 2, 1981, shooting death of Phillip Clary, 34, of Zwingle. Clary was found in a ditch near Fulton, Iowa, with a gunshot wound to the head, and died later in a Dubuque hospital.

The Iowa Supreme Court affirmed the Jackson County District Court conviction in 1982. A civil post-conviction suit in the same District Court was denied last October.

The third challenge is contained in a habeas corpus suit filed in U.S. District Court in Cedar Rapids Tuesday. Habeas corpus is a writ or order requiring that a detained person be brought before the court to decide the legality of his detention.

The challenges have centered on Manning's claim that some of the evidence used against him was seized illegally from his jail cell. He was serving time on an earlier charge when he allegedly arranged to have his cellmate kill Clary while they were out on work release.

A second defendant, Leonard Gregory, 25, told jurors at Manning's trial that he shot Clary after Manning offered him $500 and a car. Gregory said Manning told him he needed a "hit man" because Manning was having an affair with Clary's wife and he needed someone to get rid of Clary.

Gregory also was found guilty of first-degree murder.

Alleged killer of magistrate's wife, daughter back in Iowa

DENISON (AP) — The Michigan man accused in the June 16 shooting deaths of the wife and daughter of a Crawford County magistrate has been returned to Iowa after lengthy extradition proceedings.

Michael Bartnick, 26, of Detroit, was returned Tuesday to Crawford County from Welch, W.Va., where he had been held on burglary charges since July.

Bartnick is accused of killing Mary Schoenfeld, wife of Magistrate Arlo Schoenfeld, and their daughter, Cecelia, at the family's Charter Oak home.

Schoenfeld had sent Bartnick to jail in May on a car theft conviction. Authorities allege Bartnick, when he was released, took revenge against Schoenfeld by killing his family and fleeing to West Virginia.

Crawford County Attorney Tom Gustafson said Bartnick was charged Tuesday with two counts of first-degree murder.

For security reasons, Sheriff Don Steahr said, Bartnick will be held in the Buena Vista County Jail in Storm Lake, about 65 miles north-northeast of Denison. Bond was set at a total of $1 million, $500,000 on each charge.

Gustafson said Bartnick will appear Monday in Crawford County District Court to enter a plea, at which time a trial date will likely be set.

Jail holds double wedding

NEW HAMPTON (AP) — Wedding bells chimed at the Chickasaw County Jail as two prisoners married two Fayette County women in "a wedding to be proud of," Sheriff Thomas Bernatz says.

The double wedding ceremony last week between Jerry DeHart Jr., 23, of Fayette and Penny Rahe, 18, and Jay Williams of Oelwein and Rhonda Wagner, 19, was done with dignity, said Bernatz.

"It was really very nice," said Bernatz, who served as best man. The sheriff and his employees brought ice cream, nuts and mints and the brides brought the cake. Roses plucked from the garden behind the jail were fashioned into corsages and boutonnières.

Bernatz's residence, located in the jail building, was decorated with crepe paper, wedding bells and candles. His wife, Ruth, was maid of honor and jail secretary Joan Gebel poured the punch.

DeHart was in jail for the alleged theft of a $300 wedding ring and Williams was in jail for a Texas parole violation.

Body found in Mississippi River

MUSCATINE — The body of a Blue Grass man who had been missing since Sunday was found Wednesday morning floating in the Mississippi River.

The body of Craig Allen Petersen, 20, was transported to Des Moines for an autopsy. Petersen disappeared Sunday morning while walking across the Interstate 280 bridge south of Davenport.

The Muscatine County Sheriff's Department said John Kelsey of rural Buffalo was bailing out his boat near Blue Bill Ridge, two miles west of Montpelier, about 9:40 a.m. Wednesday when he spotted the body floating about 100 yards off shore. He finished bailing out the boat and then went to retrieve the body, which was taken by Buffalo Ambulance to Muscatine General Hospital.
