John C. Culver To Be Honored At Fund Dinner

Prof. E. B. Smith of Ames, state chairman of the Johnson-Humphrey ticket, will address a "Touchdown Dinner" honoring John C. Culver, Democratic candidate for Second district congressman, at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Town House.

Sponsors of the $10-a-plate fund-raising affair are the Linn county Democratic central committee and the Citizens for Culver committee.

Tickets are available at Culver headquarters at 205 First avenue SE (366-2786) or at Democratic headquarters at 327 Second avenue SE (365-9471).

Prof. Smith was the Democratic candidate for the U. S. senate from Iowa in 1962.

Boy, 14, Admits Molesting Girls In Downtown C.R.

A 14-year-old Cedar Rapids boy arrested Wednesday has admitted molesting 10 young women in recent months on downtown streets.

The boy met his match Wednesday in the person of a teen-age girl, police juvenile officers said. He grabbed the girl at Second avenue and Second street SE and then ran. The girl gave chase, caught him, and with her mother held the boy until police arrived.

The incident happened shortly after noon, officers said, as the crowd which had gathered to hear presidential nominee Barry Goldwater's speech began dispersing.

Under questioning, the youth admitted 10 molestations, all of them occurring on downtown streets in the last four months.

Juvenile Capt. Leslie Woodward said police found that only three of the ten molesting cases had been reported to them.

The boy was released to his parents and to probation officers, and will appear in juvenile court.

crats are forever demanding that he repudiate the support of some organizations.

—To Get Out—

"I am not worried about these groups, but I am a little worried about communists," he said.

"If I know of any communist that ever thinks of helping me, I am going to tell him to get out. And all I am asking of my opponents is to do the same thing."

In Belleville, Ill., Goldwater counseled a downtown crowd against making election-day choices on the basis of economic interests.

"That's all I'm hearing this year," he said, "you've never had it so good, so why change."

—Would Top 1948—

Police estimated the Belleville turnout at about 12,000; Republicans at 20,000.

Goldwater said he has the grassroots supports to produce a Republican victory, and he said that would supplant Harry S. Truman's 1948 triumph over Thomas E. Dewey as the political upset of the century.

"With about this many days to go, suddenly it occurred to me that Truman was going to beat Dewey," he said, "and all of a sudden it has come to me that I am going to beat Johnson for the same reason."

continued making Krebiozen at Promak Laboratories in Chicago and marketing it legally in Illinois. It cannot be shipped out of state because of the FDA ruling.

Daily users of Krebiozen—one report was there are 350—have come to Illinois to get it.

Flooded by Calls
 Douglas Anderson, secretary to Sen. Douglas (D-Ill.), said his office has been flooded with phone calls from Krebiozen users since the news of the suppressed indictments.

Anderson said the callers were worried about Krebiozen's continued availability. Sen. Douglas in the past has expressed interest in a clinical test of it.

Ivy's laboratory assistant, Mike Bettina, said similar calls have come to Ivy's office. Bettina said calls were told to leave their orders—and their donations to the foundation—and supplies "might" be available Thursday.

Ivy has criticized the FDA for refusing to make clinical tests of Krebiozen. The agency has said it will not test a substance whose composition and method of manufacture are kept secret.

Gun-Toter Eludes G.R. Police During Visit by Goldwater

A gun-toting man who falsely identified himself as "a Goldwater security man" managed to elude Cedar Rapids police Wednesday afternoon.

Officers said first reports of the man's activities came from the driver of a chartered bus carrying Republican supporters from Decorah. The driver said the man had posted himself at the door of the bus after the Goldwater speech and told passengers he was checking to see that the same people who arrived in the bus were returning to it.

Appeared at Tavern
 The bus remained in Cedar Rapids for some time while passengers lunched and shopped here.

The man had gone by the time police arrived. But later reports from Republican headquarters and from a downtown tavern indicated that the same man had been there. He reportedly was carrying a pistol in his shirt pocket.

Police said the man is also believed to be the one who entered a doctor's or dentist's office while Goldwater spoke and ordered the doctor or dentist to quit using binoculars to view the speaking platform.

The police said they had not yet identified who the doctor or dentist was. They learned of that incident second-hand.

—Any Radicals—

At Republican headquarters, the man entered twice and asked, "Are there any radicals around Cedar Rapids?"

The man was wearing a sport coat, was about 35 years old and weighed about 160 pounds, according to descriptions.

Charges Liquor Discount Policy Was Political

CLINTON (AP)—The Clinton county Republican chairman said Thursday that the Democratic candidate for attorney general has admitted a discount on quantity purchases of liquor was granted for political reasons.

The charge was made by George Pillers of Clinton, who said Democratic Gov. Harold Hughes and "the Democrat-controlled liquor commission are playing politics with liquor control."

Denied Before
 Pillers said the charge has been denied in the past, but added that Lawrence Scalise, Democratic candidate for attorney general, admitted it was true in an appearance here Wednesday.

"Scalise was asked whether or not it was a political move when the commission granted a liquor discount to tavern owners just a few weeks before the election," Pillers said.

Scalise Comment
 "Scalise replied 'are you kidding, of course it was political,'" Pillers said.

Scalise answered questions in an appearance before the Kiwanis club. He was law enforcement director for the liquor commission until he resigned last spring to run for attorney general.

The Overriding Issue

What is the overriding issue in the campaign for Second district congressman? The Gazette asked the two candidates, Rep. James E. Bromwell, Republican, and John C. Culver, Democrat, this question. Here are their answers:

Rep. Bromwell:

"I feel the basic issue that distinguishes this campaign from others is whether or not 13 to 14 months of continuous residence qualifies Culver to represent the district.

"The so-called carpet-bagger issue tends to obscure the basic issue as to whether or not he's had adequate preparation to deal with the job and with the people. You can't represent a district from a set of statistics.

"Whether a man can come into a district as diverse as ours and spend 14 months campaigning and leave again and still adequately represent the area is the question.

"Speaking as a citizen and with four years of experience as a congressman, my opinion is that you can't.

"The question goes to the fundamental nature of the house of representatives. It was designed to be supple and responsive and tied very closely to the people. It's the basic mechanism in the democratic process. It is the only direct link between the people and the most powerful government in the world.

"I believe a congressman must represent his area issue by issue with precision, learning the interests of the people, the diversities and complexities of the district. He must understand in some depth the relationship of his district and these areas to the United States as a whole."

Culver:

"I think the overriding issue is the need for a more positive, more progressive leadership for Iowa in the United States congress — leadership which brings persuasively to the attention of a national audience the problems, as well as the promise, of our state.

"In addition, there is need for representation which will support those programs to further, and not frustrate, the growth and development of our region.

"For example, representation to support tax cuts and tax incentive to business to spur industrial development, to support the feed grain program to assist farm income, to support water pollution control legislation to help in the growth of our tourist and recreational industry.

"Finally, I believe there is an opportunity for more vigorous representation and initiative from the office of our congressman in helping our committee and citizens with their needs.

"I believe that representation from our district in the majority party of our government makes possible the opportunity to shape and tailor legislation to fit our needs and to effectively advance our interests."
