No Details, Ownership Of Truck Determined

IOWA CITY — The ownership of the truck in which two charred bodies were discovered Monday near the Coralville reservoir has been determined, according to Johnson county Sheriff Gary Hughes.
Hughes, however, declined to disclose the identity, explaining the owner "has not been located. We are attempting to obtain dental records on the owner."
The bodies of a man and woman found in the scorched pickup truck by two motorcyclists were so extensively burned that identification may depend solely on dental records, according to investigators who viewed the bodies.
Hughes did confirm the owner of the truck is an Iowa resident, but "not of the Iowa

Expert: Busing Speeds Cities' "White Flight"

BOSTON (AP) — Sociologist James Coleman says "white flight" from cities where courts have ordered school desegregation is 14 percent greater than normal.
"The greater the disparity between the racial composition of the central city and the suburbs, the greater the acceleration of white loss," Coleman wrote in a five-page affidavit filed in a U.S. court of appeals case here Tuesday.
Coleman said that in a city like Boston, which is at least 35 percent black, a reduction in segregation by busing or other means will accelerate white flight 14 percent over normal rates.

Indeterminate Sentence in Theft Case

A one-time Cedar Rapids resident who has been held in Linn county jail for nearly two months was given an indeterminate federal prison sentence Wednesday in Cedar Rapids federal court.
Dennis Daringer, who had lived at 1933 Higley avenue SE before being jailed on state larceny charges last year, was sentenced to the indeterminate term under the youth corrections act after pleading guilty to possession of a stolen car transported in interstate commerce.
Daringer, 25, was indicted by a federal grand jury last November on two stolen car counts.
The second count of the indictment and another charge of failure to appear were dismissed Wednesday by the government. The latter charge was brought after Daringer left the country for Brazil. He was arrested on his return to the United States in July.
He faces a prison sentence not to exceed six years at federal youth corrections facility.

Former Iowan's Death Is Ruled a Suicide

ANAMOSA — Neal Robert Townsend, 29, Pocatello, Idaho, a former Anamosa resident, died Monday morning in his Pocatello apartment. Idaho medical authorities ruled the death a suicide.
Townsend, the adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Townsend, Anamosa, had been serving on the police force in Pocatello.
Graveside services will be held Thursday at 1:30 at Riverside cemetery. Visitation at Goettsch's after 9 a.m. Thursday. Casket will not be opened.

Large Haul For Thieves

A breakin during the last three days at the Eli Abodeley residence, 4217 First avenue SE, netted thieves more than $3,888 in stereo equipment and other items, according to a police report.
Among the items stolen were a $650 amplifier, $1,250 tape player and $1,100 in speakers. No value has yet been specified for jewelry and a camera also taken in the breakin.

Bus Crash Kills

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Eleven persons were killed Monday and 20 injured when a speeding bus overturned in central Thailand.

"CAN WE REALLY AFFORD THE BEST FUNERAL SERVICE?"

For someone you love, someone gone, you want the very best. But can you afford it?
At John B. Turner & Son, the answer is yes. That's because we only offer one service — our very best — to everyone.
And the modest fee for that service is the same for everyone, regardless of the cost of the casket you select.
The casket, itself, is selected by the family in complete privacy. We believe the best help we can give is to allow the family to make this choice alone, with the assurance that the Memorial Service will be our best, regardless of which casket is selected.
That's why we say, at Turner's there is only one service... our very best.

—Unhappy with Jail—changed her sentence to up to ten years at Rockwell City.
What happened, according to Kopecky, is that the legislature changed the law. Prior to this year, the law stipulated that a female could not be incarcerated more than 30 days in a county jail. Any sentence greater than that automatically sent her to Rockwell City.
Linn Sheriff Walter Grant claims the women's lib lobby got the legislature to change the law so a woman can be held in a county jail up to a year — just like a man. But most county jails in Iowa are a great deal less appealing than the women's reformatory.
The statute allows the judge to sentence either to the county jail or, in this case, up to ten years in the reformatory. Gardner took the ten years rather than six months in the county jail.
However, officials in the county attorney's office hastened to point out that she is not likely to serve ten years. "She probably be placed on parole in eight months or so," said one.

—Rail Strike—
bor and Industrial Relations at the University of Michigan.
Ford also appointed attorneys Harold Weston of New York City and Dana Eischen of Liverpool, N.Y. to the emergency board.
The board is to report its findings to the President by Oct. 4 and another 30-day period beyond that is set for the parties to try to resolve their differences without a strike.
The four unions have rejected a contract signed by most other railway unions. It provides for a 41 percent boost in wages and benefits over three years.
Under the old contract, the average wage was $5.66 an hour.
Sources said the stop craft unions were not opposed to the general terms of the agreement but differed over work rules and local issues affecting their memberships.
Efforts to resolve the dispute had been underway for several weeks at the offices of the National Mediation Board, but federal mediators were unable to break the impasse and recommended appointment of the emergency board.

—Parlay Card Cases—
raids in Cedar Rapids and confiscated parlay cards and currency.
Maximum sentence on the one count on which all seven are charged is a fine of $20,000 and imprisonment for five years. On the second count, Cartano faces an additional $5,000 fine and five years in prison.
The men were released on their own recognizance after court appearances. All but Cartano were represented by counsel Wednesday. Cartano asked for a court-appointed lawyer, saying he could not afford to retain one.
